P3a. Description, continued.

double-hung, wood-sash windows pilasters, button ornament, and architrave with shell ornament. The bay window ends in an articulated roofline with paneled frieze and bracketed modillion cornice. The left bay contains a single window with similar ornament. The building has channeled board ornament at the corners and dividing the bays on the second story. The south elevation has single windows in each bay on the first story and square bay windows in the first and third bays of the second story, alternating with single windows. All of the windows on this elevation are one-over-one, double-hung, wood sash. Both elevations terminate in a paneled frieze and bracketed modillion cornice. The building appears to be in good condition and contributes to the Hayes Valley Residential Historic District.
